(e) Examine how history and anthropology stand in relation to one another

10

Anthropology is the holistic study of man in its totality across time and space.

History is account of events for which written records are available and language has been deciphered.

History can be compared with socio cultural anthropology & archaeological anthropology.

Differences

- 1) Evans Pritchard: history only deals with literate societies while anthropology deals with 'pre literate' & 'literate societies'.
- 2) History uses secondary data like books and other records while anthropology uses primary form of data like participant observation.

3) Anthropology ~~looks~~ at present and then study past while history ~~peep~~ peeps into past upto present.

History is upside down anthropology.

Similarities

- 1) Both history & anthropology are based on facts which are subjective & relative.
- 2) Both use time as a continuous stream.
- 3) Now history also uses cultural aspect to depict societies of past.

Hence, following an interdisciplinary & independent approach, we do not compare disciplines rather place them on common platforms to benefit the humanity.
