Primates are one of the sixteen orders of class mammalia

*) Social structure among primates is based on the presence of hierarchy and helps in maintaining order and reducing violence.

1) Age: often old age primates are more dominating and have respectable position in group.

2) Aggression: more aggressiveness resembles power and influence.

1) Food resources availability

3) Sex: male primates are often more dominating.

4) Level of intelligence: The more intelligent individuals often highly placed in hierarchy.

* Social structure and hierarchy is resembled by access to ~~to~~ resources mainly food and mate partner selection

* Pusey et al (1990) conducted an experiment in National Park of Tanzania found infants of ~~more~~ highly placed primates have increased chance of survival than low ranking ones.

Hence, social structure among primates plays an important role in influencing primate behaviour primarily among humans.
