Social stratification as per ~~Marx~~ ^{Ogburn} are the methods adopted by society to differentiate between a group of people and rank them accordingly.
(ex) Caste system in India

Functional theory

This theory was propounded by Davis, Moor, Durkheim, Talott Parson

It states: - 1. Inevitability of social stratification.

2. It helps in systematic classification and assign roles and position.

3. Proportional distribution of rewards.

4. Most able person do the job → Specific work → thus patterned

View

Talcott Parson view it as 'patternisation' of social order through social stratification, through which ordering of society happens.

Durkheim says it helps maintain social solidarity and social order in society.

Jan's :- argued that three kinds of reward are distributed

Thus social status, role, position, power are distributed as per the stratification.

However it was criticised

① Marxist → said it justifies the status-quo thus leads to exploitation of lower class.

② Tumin - countered the historical validity in patterns of classfication in stratification

③ Ethnic difference, racial difference can't be justified just by functional aspects -

④ Slavery (e.g. Suffering of negrees) and colonialism finds no justification through functional theory.

Thus, though functional theory justified stratification role in society (e.g. Jajmani system → economic particularism based on caste stratification), it had its limitation while applying universally -
