

(Don't Write anything in this Area)

1.e) Is Joint Family dying in India

Joint family is defined by Thavati Kerve has features of common kitchen common roof common prayer hall and patriarch to direct usage of common property.

Joint family has undergone modifications in India (Census 2011) but nature depends on specific circumstances

Joint family dying

① Industrialisation / Modernisation

money economy women education mobility collapse of household as unit

② Education → better opportunities

③ Individuality reassertion through moving out → neolocality

Joint Family Thriving

① MS Gore → Agrawal family of Delhi continue to remain intact despite values changing (no longer oldest person driving decision)

② Multon Singer industrialist in Chennai → continue to exist → prevent wealth being distributed

③ K.M Kapadia in Newera & I.P Desai also show only some families show change.

The Census 2011 shows joint family being important again due to high cost of living, socialisation of child (grandparents), social capital

Contemporary trends: while it has declined in the west in America, in Europe (Clayworth's null hypothesis) it remains intact implying India can also resist breakdown despite its effects of industrialisation