

in Kinship Studies

Traditionally kinship is defined as set of status and role, due to conjugal or affinal ties.

Janet Carsten studied Malayan society and gave concept of relatedness in her work: Culture of Relatedness (2000)

Concept of Relatedness

- 1> It rejects conjugal or affinal ties as only means of kinship
- 2> It says kinship develops by being related to each-other.
- 3> This involves helping each-other, spending time, sharing emotions.

Relevance

- 1> It broadened the scope of ~~how~~ how kinship bonds are formed.
- 2> Due to modern forces of globalization, industrialization — family bonds are getting weak — while non-family bonds are getting stronger.
