

Q.4b (15 marks): Explain the approaches of studying family in Anthropology

(Don't Write anything in this Area)

Explain the approaches of studying family in Anthropology. (15 marks)

William Newton Stephens defines family as a group based on marriage or marriage contract, involving recognition of rights and duties of parenthood, a common residence for husband, wife and children and a reciprocal economic obligations between husband and wife.

Approaches to Study Family

① Evolutionary studied by LH Morgan in 'System of Cosanguinity and affinity of Human Family (1871)':

- (i) Cosanguineous Family: Which has marriage between brothers and sisters.
- (ii) Punaluan family: Group of sisters marrying each other husbands or group of ~~brothers~~ brothers marrying wives.

(iii) Syndasmian: Consanguineous but not co-habitation.

(iv) Patrilocal Family

(v) Monogamous Family.

② Functional approach

(i) G.P. Murdock in 'Social Structure (1949)' gives essential functions of family (Nuclear)

(ii) Ralph Linton in 'Study of Man (1936)' gives functions of consanguineous family.

(iii) Talcott Parsons: gives following irreducible functions of family.

- ↳ Primary socialisation.
- ↳ Stability of adult members.

③ Marxists Approach

- Seeks to study family and how it affects Capitalism. Marxists say that family supports idea of Capitalism.

- (i) By reducing bargaining power of worker.
- (ii) By producing conditioned labourer.
- (iii) Acts as ideological apparatus to establish idea of authority.

4) Feminists Approach.

- Attacks idea of family by attacking 'Role of Mother and Motherhood'. This explains prevalence of single parent, skip generation families.

→ The Anthropological approaches to study family from different perspectives hence helps to re-affirm Holism as the Hallmark of Anthropology as a discipline.

Marks: Comment:

Intro:

Body:

Conclusion:

Total: