(a) Kinship and gender role.

(10 Marks)

Kinship is the web of social relations that occur due to blood line (consanguinal) & through marriage (affinal).

Kinship and kinship terminologies are greatly influenced by gender roles. In patriarchal and patrilineal societies like Omaha, in the kinship terminologies, we can see merging of generations on mother-side thus showing less importance. The inverse is true in case of Crow which is matrilineal.

Kinship also acts as a device to determine marriageability. In Trobriand system, cross-cousin marital alliances are allowed which shows up in kinship terminologies.

Some kinship behaviour like joking relationship can also be seen to establish gender roles.

Eg. In South India joking relationship exists between uncle-niece suggesting potential marital alliance.

Eg. In some societies, joking relationship exists between grand father and grand daughter suggesting gender roles.

Some kinship behaviour like technonymy shows the subjugated role of one gender towards the other.

Customs like novade, ~~star~~ avoidance show the power dynamics between different genders. Thus, kinship and kinship behaviour suggests the gender roles in the society.
