

(b)

Redistribution is a form of economic exchange where resource (surplus) gets collected towards a chief or leader and then gets redistributed.
Karl Polanyi in his "The Great Transformation" mentioned it as form of exchange.

ex: - Gnani among Trobriand
Islanders

Redistribution in contemporary Society

① Taxation system - states tax income, items and collect revenue and then redistributes it in the form of welfare schemes, infrastructure creation, services etc.

② International organisations like WHO, WFP (World food programme) work by taking voluntary-involuntary donations then helping the country in need.

③ Some land reforms like Vinobha Bhave's Bhudan movement → land collected then redistributed.

④ Social media giants like Facebook, Google collect our data, then based on that data → makes our feed for social media - redistributes the content.

Redistribution thus market in various ways in current society.