

③ Intensive agricultural societies: In these societies, agriculture is almost in the purview of men. The status of women is declined and is confined to mostly domestic work and child raising.

④ Modern societies: Due to rise of feminist movements, the notion of division of labour along patriarchal lines has been questioned. There has been rising trend of shared domestic work and a more gender neutral division of labour.

Thinkers like Karl Marx also explained the class-wise division of labour pointing out how working class has been exploited by capital class. Thus, the dynamics of division of labour in modern societies have been changing due to rising awareness on equality and rights.
