

5.c) Theories of State Formation

State societies have evolved from stateless in the following order as per Evans Pritchard

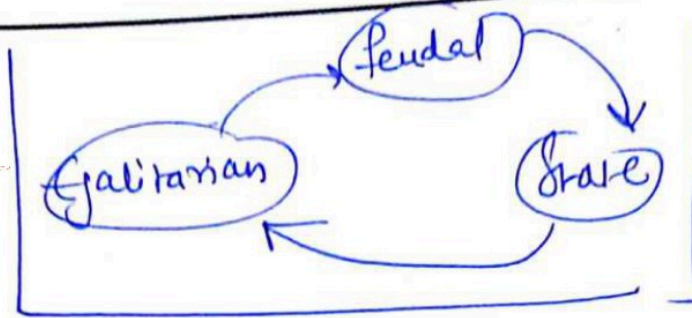

Band → Village → Age → Lineage → State

This ~~refer~~ is the most widely accepted Evolutionary theory (unilinear) of state formation.

Other theories behind this are →

Edmund Leach — Dynastic theory → highlighted in his study of Kachin of Myanmar → He said state formation is not unilinear instead involves complex politics and cyclical political instability and stability.

State formation has taken place in sync with economic evolution of societies. With efficient economies $\Rightarrow$ surplus increased $\Rightarrow$ full time specialists could be employed.

~~Modern States $\rightarrow$ complex systems~~

Functionalist - His theory says that-

State was formed to bring social order in heterogeneous society and to fulfill needs of punishment, social justice.

Thus, State societies formed from non State due to evolved needs of the society with time and are widespread today in modern ~~society~~ era.
