

- (c) Briefly discuss nature, meaning and scope of Political Anthropology. Also Differentiate between Primitive and Modern Law. (15 marks)

Political Anthropology is a sub-branch of socio cultural anthropology that studies administration, laws, division of power and authority as a socio-cultural phenomenon.

PIONEER WORKS

- ① African Political System (1940) by Meyer Fortes discussed how political organisation in primitive societies is different from modern societies
- ② Political System of Highland Burma (1959) by Edmund Leach

SCOPE ① The discipline helps us understand how tribal laws are based in them

Culture and law are aimed at restoring social harmony rather than punishing culprit

laws are codified rules enacted by someone in authority the deviation from which attracts penal action

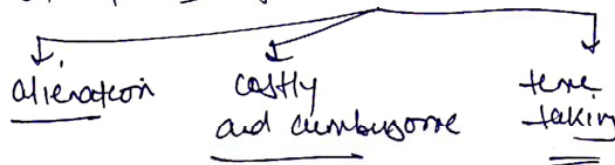

PRIMITIVE

- aim at ensuring social harmony
- enforced by leaders (chiefs)
- social sanctions
- locus of authority ~~is~~ can ~~not~~ be diffused
- mostly charismatic, hereditary authority
e.g. Chieftain

MODERN

- aim at punishing the culprit
- enforced by dedicated bureaucracy
- fines, imprisonment
- ~~can be diffused~~ at top
- mostly constitutional (legal) authority

Sustained Natchippen committee (2016) notes that efforts to impose modern laws on tribals fail due to

The committee recommended to setup a "tribal judicial authority" to integrate both laws

Today, political anthropology has helped policymakers understand the issue of regionalism and exclusionism
