

(a) Briefly describe Non-verbal communication in language and its significance. (20 marks)

Non-Verbal Communication (NVC) refers to ~~send~~ communication via sending and receiving wordless messages.

Various ways of NVC are as follows:

① Proxemics ② Haptics ③ Kinesics ④ Paralanguage ⑤ Physical Environment

① Proxemics: It refers to the use of distance in communication.

for $\rightarrow$ conversation ~~be~~ with shorter distance may communicate intimacy between sender and recipient.

② Haptics: involves the use of touch to communicate. $\rightarrow$ patting on ~~back~~ someone's back to signal good performance.

③ Kinesics: involves use of body language and various gestures to communicate.

Gestures have cultural meanings
and can have multiple meanings.

④ Paralanguage: it involves use of non-verbal aspects of speech like tone,
pitch, etc. It may signal the emotions,
mood, attitude, etc of the sender.

⑤ Physical Environment at the place
may communicate formal or informal setting.

⑥ Chronemics makes use of time
as a means to communicate.

▷ M-time schedule: social relations
are given priority.

└ P-time schedule: individual work
and goals prioritised over social relations.

Significance of NVC

- ① Development of sign language →
 & sign languages rely on non-verbal aspects of communication and can aid individuals who have hearing challenges.
- ② Preventing inter-cultural misunderstanding:
 various body movements and gestures have different meanings in different cultures. Hence awareness of NVC is must to prevent mis-understanding.
- ③ Aid in effective Communication: Verbal Communication can carry limited message. Verbal coupled with non-verbal can enhance quality of communication by conveying emotions, feelings, conviction, etc of the speaker to the audience.

Thus NVC has equal relevance
in effectiveness of communication like that of verbal communication.
