

1.e) Socio-Linguistics and Ethnography of Communication

Communication is process of exchanging information among people. Socio-Linguistics refers to how people communicate within given social contexts.

Ethnographies of communication have studied how socio-linguistics is seen :

- ① Prestige → people prefer certain kind of vocabulary, accent to showcase prestige.
(eg.) use of sanskrit in ancient india.
- ② In social status ⇒ william Labov studied how upper class speak less standard language. Middle class speak more standard as aspire for mobility.
- ③ Age is reflected in communication ⇒
(eg.) Chagnon in Yanomamo study highlighted how younger people don't name dead ancestors in front of elders.

(4) Sex  $\Rightarrow$  society was different kind of communication based on sex of speaker.

(eg) Japanese female use add 'o' at start of words eg 'ohasi' for chopsticks while males call it 'hasi'

(5) Education  $\Rightarrow$  More education leads to variation in language

(eg) Vineeta Chand studied Mumbai children and how more educated use code-switched language.

(6) Globalization  $\Rightarrow$  Globalization has affected language patterns and communication.

(eg) Study of hip-hop communities  $\Rightarrow$  how these communities across follow similar language socio-linguistics shows that speech communities get formed based on different needs of communication.
