

i.b) Historical Linguistics

Historical linguistics is a component of linguistic anthropology. It studies how forms of languages have diverged from parent form.

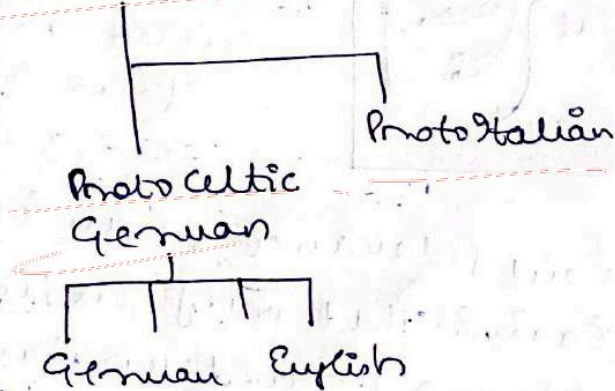

It's scope :- a) studies language families

b) studies linguistic divergence.

c) studies migration patterns of speakers and its intermingling with autochthonous.

(a) Language family is a group of families that share similar ancestor and have diverged since.

Proto Latin

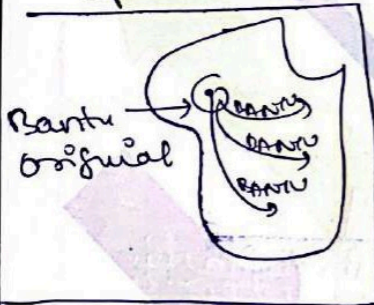

Similarities may be seen between other languages like English, French and Spanish. (Eg) padre = patr = father (Spanish) (French) (English)

Base mean father.

(b) Linguistic Divergence :- Is the spreading out of languages from parent form. This is due to

- 1) geographic factors that isolate cultures
- 2) migration and immigration of other cultures.

Historical Linguistics of Bantu Speakers :-

During neolithic revolution, as population expanded, the North West Bantu speakers moved around and spread their language.

Current Relevance :- Can help us explain relation of Indus Valley script and Dravidian languages (Polish and French scholars said)