(d) Relationship between language and culture

Language and culture presents an important part of the society.

As per Bernard Bloch language is a system of vocal & written symbols through which a social groups communicates.

EB Tylor defines culture as a system of norms, habits, rules learned by man as member of society.

* Sapir Whorf hypothesis showed how both language and culture affects each other.

↳ For example Among ~~Khas~~ Koya of South India, there are several categories ~~are~~ of names of Bamboo. This showed ~~culture~~ language affects culture.

* Among Hanunuo; various colour codes are given to wet & dry colour.

* Both language and culture affects each other.

Functionalist
approach

→ language is the functions to serve needs of society with help of culture

→ language helps in transmission of meanings and symbols which are part of culture.

Structuralist
approach

→ language is a set of structurally related elements like phonemes, grammars

→ They help culture with ~~their~~ defining meanings of various symbols.

Hence, both language & culture influence each other.
